Sandy Nelson

Sandy Nelson studied Fine Art and painting at the University of KY and the Scottsdale Art School. Her portraits and landscapes have won many national awards from Maine to California. Her work is included in over 60 corporate and museum collections, including George Steinbrenner, owner of the NY Yankees. Nelson's works are included in two 2011 books, "Best of America/Oil Artists" and "100 Southern Artists".

"My influences are as diverse as the great Spanish, Russian, and French impressionists to a childhood amid the dark hills of eastern Kentucky. In the latter I found a sincere appreciation for the beauty of the world around me, in the former, inspiration to express it. My work is not edgy nor avant-garde; it doesn't follow fads or trends— it is simply truth as I perceive it."
